Please provide an example of one way you 'help' your human accomplish a task better than they could do it by themselves.

My humans think (wrong) that they know how to walk up and down the stairs. Every single day I shows them that the best way to do it is to walk down three steps and then lie down and wait for a human to come. Then when they start to step, you move a bit and they get all weird and they flail arms around and go crash boom to the floor. It's so much faster for them to go from top to bottom when they don't use their feet. They don't seem to like it very much, but we keep trying to show them how much more efficient we are.

What is the funniest thing that has ever happened to you?

Last week I was playing on the printer in the living room. We always jump up and then we are halfway upstairs already. So I jumped off printer onto stairs, but I think meowmies moved the stair railings closer together, because my bum bum got stuck in the railings. Mama says I was pooh bearing myself into the stairs. I tried to squeeze, but then I lost my grip and I fell down on the printer. Meowmies said maybe I should eat a few less cookies before I try to go through again. I think they should just stop moving the railings closer.

Please share your adoption story

We got borned and then our furry mom died away and we were really really really tiny. We were scareded a lot and didn't know what to do. Larry looked for food and Momo was trying to figure out how to build communication system to call Paw-One-One and Timmy was letting me suck on his head cuz that helped and Lulu was really wimpy and Pucky was working out how to stay all warm. I felled down and broke eight ribs, so I taught myself to sleep really good because it hurted. And then some people came and they grabbed us all and they tooked us to the Shelly house. And we lived in the living room and we had lots of food and she helped us grow big and strong, and she let us hang out with grampa Mason who is this really old cool guy. And then one day some strangers came, and we were scareded, and they took us away. That was our meowmies and we weren't scared for much time. We came to a big house with STAIRS and we are never hungry and we have cookies and toys and we gets to play with each other all the time.
